Message ...

The international arena of academicians and professionals is deeply interested in comprehending complex educational interactions. This comprehension will promote an understanding for constructing international relations policy for education and other allied areas. These policies will lead to solutions that will meet the challenges of today and the future as well. International Relations will offer a comprehensive and moderate toolkit particularly well-matched to employment in a rapidly changing world.

In the same line of thought, with the introduction of the National Education Policy 2020 of country, a Directorate of International Relations (DIR) is established in the MJP Rohilkhand University, Bareilly, Uttar Pradesh, India. This University is a truly multi-dimensional and multi-disciplinary university by virtue of having almost the entire major and minor streams of global knowledge, subjects, disciplines, and courses or programmes either on its Campus or on the premises of the colleges affiliated to it.

Directorate of International Relations will elevate the university's academic and professional understanding of its individuals and make them world market-ready. The DIR will facilitate individuals and institutions to collaborate and execute international issues. The DIR will enhance the international students' knowledge in acquiring a scientific way to look at the international educational avenues and give students a powerful tool for analyzing and solving it from an appropriate angle among many perspectives.

I hope the DIR will be a potential platform for university students to become more responsible and world market-ready.

i. Student Exchange Program

Today's higher education institutions must be more than just a place to get a degree. In order to recruit students in highly competitive markets, Colleges and universities must create welcoming and dynamic campus environment and foster the kind of educational opportunities that translate in to success beyond the college years.

There are four benefits of bringing foreign students to study at MJPRU, Bareilly.

- International students foster a diverse campus environment.
- International students enrich learning environment with cultural perspectives.
- Recruitment of international students attracts the Best of the Best.
- International students create significant income opportunities.

To be in world university rankings list MJPRU will encourage foreign students to study at MJPRU. Students exchange programs will be initiated in different fields of Natural Sciences, Engineering, Pharmacy, Hotel management, Humanities, Social Sciences and Management. Under this program students will have exposure to visit the leading institutes and industry of their fields. Students will have exposure to understand the latest technology hands on experience in laboratories and different culture.

There will be both short-term and long-term exchange programs for students during which the Conferences, workshops, seminars, discussion, Internships and visit to industry and institutes/universities will be organized in India and abroad.

To focus on attracting international students through overseas entrance exams and scholarship exams will be held by MJPRU in different countries in Asian and African continents for admission to the university UG, PG and Ph.D. programs.

World rankings are primarily based on six indicators: Academic reputation, Employer reputation, Student faculty ratio, Infrastructure, Citations per faculty, International faculty and student ratio. Around 40% weightage in the rankings is about perception of the university its campus and infrastructure. More than the perception, universities are judged on their strength of international students, international faculty and academic reputation and also on number of scholarships awarded to international students.

An exchange program allows students from two universities in two different countries to spend a semester or two in the other institution while taking courses. Students from the “home university” become visiting students in the “host university” for a limited time to increase their international exposure. This arrangement is made possible by a student exchange agreement between the two universities.

To increase research collaboration between two universities a graduate student exchange program is a useful tool. In such a program for example graduate students may spend a period in the host university possibly using the facilities or equipments of the host university not available at the home university/institution. In the same period it is also possible for graduate students to take courses in the host university not offered in the home university in the same period.

ii. Faculty exchange Program

The university campus internationalization depends mostly on faculty interest, involvement and commitment to incorporate international substance to their courses and to establish new programs with an international approach. Faculty members who will participate in foreign exchange programs try to infuse their international experience through establishing comprehensive campus internationalization.

Short term international exchange program for faculty from foreign countries will help to internationalize the MJPRU campus through teaching, research and services. The different services include an extracurricular program to include an international and intercultural dimension, greater recruitment of international students, study abroad programs, internationalized curriculum, distance education and combination of partnerships abroad, research and scholarly collaboration.

This program will further expose the significance of faculty international development on the assimilation of global education and international culture in to their research and teaching.

Faculty members will be encouraged to increase their efforts to study and teach overseas as more people recognize the significance of faculty international experience on students. Increased number of international students and visitors to MJPRU will contribute effectively to the cross cultural understanding. Thus faculty members must receive direct knowledge through faculty exchange programs to understand other cultures and participate in campus internationalization.

International Research Exchange

To raise the bar on international collaborations, to boost the teaching and research quality MJPRU will be the university where the scholars pursue their passions through rigorous academics, a flexible curriculum and innovative research programs. Research scientists and students from developing countries will be given opportunity to conduct their research work (partial or full) in the university under the guidance of MJPRU faculty members to improve their own research capabilities. This will foster scientific and technology related exchange/ cooperation between MJPRU and universities in other countries.
